The Fitz John Porter Case.

NEW YORK, July 19.—It is a serious misapprehension to suppose that Fitz John Porter's plea to acquittal of the charge of disobedience of orders rests upon the proposition that a subordinate officer may fail to obey an unconditional order because his own judgment is against its wisdom. Pope's dispatch to Porter was in terms based upon Pope's supposition that Porter had in his front only an insignificant body covering the enemy's flank. Porter being on the ground had later or better information that Longstreet's whole corps had [illegible]. He was ordered to attack the enemy's flank, but the flank was not there. Consequently the order could not be literally obeyed, and an attack at all would result in the capture of all Pope's command. Porter's claim is that the order was conditional and that it was his duty to exercise the discretion which subsequent events have shown was wise and patriotic, but only on the [illegible] Pope's order depended upon conditions regarding the position of the enemy of which he knew Porter would have the information.

ENGLAND AND THE ORIENT.

Beaconsfield Lays Before Parliament the Fruits of his Diplomacy.

The British Parliament

LONDON, July 19.—The Marquis of Hartington gave notice in the house of commons that he will at an early day call attention to papers relating to the eastern question and move a resolution.

William H. Smith, first lord of the admiralty, replying to Lord Robert Montagu, said Admiral Hornby had telegraphed that the flag captain of the British fleet in [illegible] has had an interview with Gen. Todleben, who said he had heard nothing of the firing into the [illegible] of war boat. He has sent to demand the release of the English sailors detained by Russians near the Gulf of Saros. Todleben said he extremely regretted the occurrence and promised to send an officer specially to the Gulf of Saros to make inquiries concerning the affair. He said he was sure the superior officers of the Russian army in that district were ignorant of the attack upon the boat.

The scene in the house surpassed in brilliancy and animation anything within the memory of the living. Every part of the chamber was densely crowded. The passage between Lord Salisbury and Lord Derby was very sharp. Lord Salisbury said Lord Derby was constantly making revelations. This was his third speech since he left the cabinet. On each occasion he had an instalment of some fatal tale. Like Dr Oates he said Lord Derby did not know how much the public would endure. He gave his story in broken doses. So far as his (Lord Salisbury's) memory served Lord Derby's statement was not true.

On being called to order Lord Salisbury substituted the term "incorrect" for "not true," and disclaimed any intention to impugn Lord Derby's veracity.

Beaconsfield's Speech.

LONDON, July 19.—Beaconsfield to-night made a speech giving account of his actions at the Berlin congress. He went into several details explaining the points, claiming it was a triumph of modern ideas. The speech was well received. Its substance was as follows:

The speaker said he could show that in the changes which were made in the treaty of San Stefano by the treaty of Berlin a menace to the independence of Europe had been removed, and that threatened injury to the British empire [illegible]. It was said that with the congress [illegible] what may be called New Turkey they were establishing an indefensible frontier, but it was [illegible] courage and intrepidity that [illegible] and it would be found that if left to those who defended Plevna that frontier could [illegible] indefensible. Lord Beaconsfield's statement [illegible] throughout a strong bias in favor of the Turks. He almost apologized for the limitation of the sultan's authority in Eastern Roumelia. One of the greatest obstacles to an object which the congress was unanimous, namely the reestablishment of the sultan as a real independent authority, was the anarchical condition of Bosnia and neighboring countries. The most complete authorities had convinced him that it would have taken [illegible] 000 of Turkey's best troops to secure any approach to order in Bosnia. Even then the attempt would perhaps have been unsuccessful and such an effort must have secured Turkey's absolute ruin. Submitting to the wishes of a majority of the congress, Austria undertook occupation at the suggestion of Lord Salisbury, earnestly supported by himself (Beaconsfield). The object in recommending occupation was to protect Turkey. Government had consistently resisted the principle of partition of Turkey, because exclusive of any consideration of morality it was believed an attempt at partition would eventually lead to a long and sanguinary war. Continuing he said it was remarkable that after a great war and prolonged negotiations all the powers, Russia as strictly and completely as the others, came to an unanimous conclusion that the best chance for tranquility of the world was to retain the sultan as part of the European system. He pointed out that every great war was followed by a redistribution of territory, but that was not a partition. Austria had perhaps lost more provinces than even Turkey. France lost provinces but she was still a great power with a commanding future. England lost some of her most precious possessions through bad government, the loss of which every Englishman must deplore at this moment and which would not have occurred if the principle which now governs her relations with her colonists had been observed. He then defended the principle of a limit not being fixed to Austrian occupation, as that would have held out hope to agitators.

Earl Beaconsfield in summing up the general results of the treaty as regards European Turkey pointed out that exclusive of Bosnia and Bulgaria she still contained 60,000 square miles and a population of 6,000,000. When the line of the Balkans was fixed Prince Bismarck had said "Turkey in Europe once more exists." He (Lord Beaconsfield) did not think such results unsatisfactory or inadequate even if obtained after a struggle like that of the Crimea. Russia only having obtained Bessarabia in Europe naturally looked for a reward to her conquest in Armenia. It was unfair to argue as though negotiations relative to Armenia had been for a conclusion of peace between England and Russia. Turkey had by the treaty of San Stefano already given up Kars, Batoum, etc. If England had gone to war to recover them the war would have been long and expensive and probably like most wars would have ended in a compromise. Kars had been already three times taken by the Russians. Would parliament have sanctioned war in order to restore it to Turkey that Russia might take it again when the next misunderstanding arose, or to prevent the cession of Batoum harbor, which is barely capable of holding six ships? The government thought it advisable not to begrudge these conquests to Russia, especially after obtaining the restoration of Bayazid and the district. But it seemed at the same time necessary to consider whether some effort was not possible to improve the general condition of Asiatic Turkey and prevent the perpetually recurring wars always terminating in shaking the authority of the Porte and diminishing the means of profitably and advantageously governing the country. He pointed out that other European powers were naturally not so interested as England in affairs connected with our oriental empire, therefore anything to effectually guard our interests in that quarter must be framed by ourselves. Though the object of the Anglo Turkish convention was certainly to place England in a position in which she might be connected with a force necessary when any great transactions were contemplated, even though she may not feel it necessary to have recourse to force, but the object of the convention was not merely or chiefly military but to produce peace and tranquillity so as to open up to the wealth and enterprise of Europe what is really another continent. But we must remember that England had an enormous and substantial interest in the east, and that if it did not interfere in the vindication of those interests Asia Minor must become a victim to anarchy and ultimately pass to Russia, who would not be blamable in profiting by such a state of affairs. Let Russia keep what she has obtained. England now said "thus far and no further." Asia is large enough for both Russia and England. There is no reason for constant war or fears of war between them. Lord Beaconsfield said he could not at present communicate details of the proposed reforms in Asia Minor, as he was acting with Turkey, which was an independent power and whose consent was required to all the measures. The government's operations were in the interest of peace and civilization. It did not mainly rely on fleets and armies however great, but on the consciousness of nations that our empire is one of liberty and justice.

Lord Hartington's Resolution.

The resolution that Lord Hartington gave notice in the house of commons to-day that he should move will be as follows:

Resolved, That while the house has learned with satisfaction that the troubles in the east have been terminated by the treaty of Berlin without further recourse to arms, and rejoices in the extension of liberty and self government to some of the populations of Turkey in Europe, it regrets that it has not been found practical to deal more satisfactorily with the claims of the Greeks in regard to Asiatic Turkey; that the military liabilities of this country have been unnecessarily extended [illegible] undefined engagement for the [illegible] administration of the Asiatic provinces [illegible] many responsibilities on the state while no sufficient means are indicated for securing [illegible] ment, and that these responsibilities [illegible] curred without previous knowledge of parliament.

Debate on the resolution will probably [illegible] in the [illegible].

The Outrages in Thessaly

BERLIN, July 19.—France has [illegible] joint report of the [illegible] were a[illegible] Turkish outrages in Thessaly.

Austrian Occupation

VIENNA, July 19.—Caratheodori Pasha raises difficulties in his negotiations with the Austrian government relative to the occupation of Turkish provinces. He insists that the sultan's sovereignty over Bosnia and Herzegovina has been recognized and that the duration and extent of the occupation should be previously settled. Neither the date of the departure of General Philippovich nor the movement of the army across the frontier have [illegible] It will be impossible.

Russian Movements in Asia

A Berlin dispatch announces that Russia [illegible] to appoint diplomatic agents at various points in Asiatic Turkey to watch [illegible] interests. Russia is also making in [illegible] the early construction of the [illegible] railway from Orenburg into Central Asia [illegible].

Gortschakoff and Schouvaloff

LONDON, July 19.—A Berlin dispatch says Prince Gortschakoff has returned to St. Petersburg instead of going to Wildbad as he had intended. Gortschakoff goes to St. Petersburg to oppose intrigues for his overthrow and Count Schouvaloff's promotion.

The Statement of Beaconsfield

LONDON, July 19.—Nearly all the morning papers comment favorably on Lord Beaconsfield's statement in the house of lords last evening in explanation of the British plenipotentiaries in the Berlin congress.

The Times thinks that Lord Derby transgressed his rights and customs which it is desirable to uphold on making public his recollections of a former discussion of the cabinet.

English Railway Project—Austria and Italy

PARIS, July 19.—The cabinet have decided to send as many troops as possible to Anzin, the scene of the colliers strike.

LONDON, July 19.—Two parties of railway experts under direction of the government will examine the Tigris and Euphrates valleys for the best railway route to the Persian Gulf.

The rumor of the probability of the resignation of Count Cairoli, Italian prime minister, is denied. The entire ministry approve his conduct and will accept the responsibility therefor before parliament.

Fifty meetings in favor of annexation of Southern Tyrol to Italy are organizing in the principal towns. The agitators are extremists and their course is disapproved by the best people. The government cannot interfere with their meetings so long as they do not violate the law, though the bad effect in Austria is fully recognized.

Emigration to Cyprus.

ALEXANDRIA, July 19.—Emigration from Egypt to Cyprus is proceeding on a large scale, and it is probable direct service of steamers will be established between this port and Cyprus.

WASHINGTON CITY

The Four per Cent Bonds

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The demand for small denominations of four per cent bonds is so great that the treasury cannot furnish them fast enough and are many days behind orders.

The Regular Cabinet Meeting.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—In the cabinet to-day some discussion occurred on revenue troubles in South Carolina, where four internal revenue officials while in search of Redmon, the illicit distiller, killed in self defense a man named Ladd, in whose house Redmon was concealed. Officers immediately went to Greenville, gave themselves up and were indicted for murder. An attempt was made to have the case transferred to the state court. This has been refused. The attorney general announced that he would direct the U S marshal to take out a writ of habeas corpus for transfer of the prisoners. This course was approved.

The president laid before the cabinet a letter from Queen Victoria officially announcing the death of the late king of Hanover.

Now for Another Commonplace Speech

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The president leaves to-night to attend the soldiers reunion at Newark, Ohio. He will be accompanied by Gen Sherman and Attorney General Devens.

The More Murder Trial

SAN BUENAVENTURA, July 19.—This morning H. H. More was sworn. He testified that he had employed the witnesses Ferguson and [illegible] since the murder. He had also conversed often with the witness Jesse Jones.

Prosecution excepted to reporter's statement that More had been found with the juror Prince in the presence of the sheriff, Mr Haymond, and insisted on his statement of the fact. He did not believe there was anything wrong on the part of the juror, but More should not have been there.

Harley Sprague testified that his father, the prisoner, was at home on the night of the murder. Mrs Churchill testified that her husband and McCart, two of the prisoners, were at home that night, the latter being quite sick. Mrs Hunt, wife of another prisoner, testified that her husband had to get up on the fatal night to drive stock off his unfenced barley field, a circumstance which often happened in that dry year. A daughter of the prisoner Sprague testified that there was no water in a certain slough where Jones had sworn there was.

The chances now are that the case will not reach the jury before Monday night at the earliest. Tax payers are becoming appalled at the probable size of the bills by the time all the prisoners are tried.

The defense rather unexpectedly rested at noon, declining the court's offer to allow them to impeach the sanity of the witness Hickerson, now dead. Prosecution occupied the afternoon in impeaching Sprague's character and defending that of state's evidence Jones. A number of witnesses were introduced on both points who seemed to offset other witnesses called on these points. In the evening an informal agreement was arrived at that the prosecution in further rebuttal would close before 10 o'clock to-morrow and the defense in surrebuttal would finish during the afternoon and evening. This will bring on the arguments of two of the counsel on each side, which is the agreement, on Monday, and the case will probably be submitted on that evening. Messrs Ganahl and Howard will address for the prosecution and Mr Fay and Hon Creed Haymond for the defense.

Mysterious Affair.

STOCKTON, July 19.—Mrs Geo Steinmitz and eldest daughter were found drowned in a water trough at the ranch of Geo Steinmitz, two miles from Banta, this afternoon. The affair is shrouded in mystery. The water in the trough was about 18 inches deep and the feet of the dead were up and out of water. Mr Steinmitz, husband and father, was absent from home in the mountains with his sheep and is expected to come home to-day. Circumstances indicate that the death of these persons was caused either by murder or suicide.

A View of the Indian War

[From the [illegible].]

It should be apparent to the government that there are not regular troops enough to spare from other portions of the country to subdue the Indians now at war. The Indians won't fight pioneers unless they are isolated and practically defenseless, and the short and cheap road to peace is for the present to notify the Washington and Idaho territorial governors to organize their militia and send them in search of the savages.

[illegible]

After depredating at and around Stein's mountain and running off $40,000 worth of the finest horses on the Pacific coast, the hostiles were apparently undecided which way to turn, so they traveled slowly along the vicinity of Harney valley, gathering up all the [illegible] a glutton[illegible] fat beeves, until first struck by Bernard on Silver river or creek. This is a fine open country, abundantly covered with bunch grass on the hills, with red top and rye grass on the creek bottoms. The settlers receiving warning in time barely escaped with their lives. Their houses were ransacked and everything destroyed. Every little article in the various houses the red fiends could not carry away was rendered utterly useless, even to such little affairs as coffee mills and milk pans. The command after Howard's arrival started in hot pursuit. The trail was fresh and in many instances so closely were they pushed that their fresh fires were still burning. A night march by the cavalry took place from the South Fork of John Day river over a country that has few parallels for roughness in Eastern Oregon. In the darkness of night mountains were climbed and descended that under other circumstances would have been deemed impassable, but the men, intent on overhauling and punishing the depredators, made light of all obstacles and pushed with not a word of complaint. So closely were the cavalry on their track that on arriving on the mountains north of Murderer's creek the rear guard of the enemy were seen in hundreds covering the mountains on the other side, just going over the summit. The horses of the soldiers being worn down with over 24 hours steady work, further pursuit was impossible, and the command halted to feed and rest. The only settler here was a man named Stewart, a large sheep farmer. His household goods were destroyed and scattered to the four winds. All his fine rams were killed and showed by unmistakable evidence that they had been skinned while yet alive.

After four hours rest the command again started with the intention of getting into the John Day valley and preventing much damage being done. About three miles from the ranch on the old immigrant road the troops came upon the scene of a fight in which the Canyon City volunteers had participated. Here was found the naked body of a man completely scalped and his nose cut off. Having no tools the advance scouts built a huge grave of rocks over him, with a paper describing his appearance, mode of death, etc. The troops then advanced on down the south fork and at dark entered the John Day valley. The appearance of the houses too plainly showed the hostiles had been ahead. At the bridge two sheep herders were killed; the valley was abandoned and nearly desolate. At a farm owned by Cummings the citizens had made a stand for a time, but were finally driven off with no dead of their own to grieve for and cause for rejoicing from the fact that they had at least removed one redskin off the earth. The house was burned, but barns, stables, haystacks and outhouses were intact. For some strange reason only in exceptional instances have the Indians burned houses, and they have worked hard to destroy when a match would have made the thing complete without trouble.

The John Day valley is essentially a wool growing country. It has been settled over 20 years and the settlers generally were well off. Thousands of sheep are now scattered in the hills unattended, and the losses will foot up into many thousands.

From here the troops followed the Indians over the hills into Fox valley—a high valley, luxuriantly covered with grass and surrounded with fine pine. Here one sheep herder was killed.

At Long valley, six miles further on, the settlers, aggregating some 75 men, women and children, were found forted up in a rickety stockade. The men were of the true frontier stamp and owed their lives solely to the bold stand they made. Baffled in not surprising, murdering and mutilating the defenseless, the Indians directed their hellish propensities to wrecking everything imaginable. Wells were filled up, houses burned, and horses, mules, sheep and cattle wantonly killed. The land here is exceedingly fertile, being composed of a fine black loam extending even to the tops of the hills. It is a new settlement and the citizens were just beginning to get along when the raid took place, completely ruining many, who lost their all.

On Camas prairie, another sheep farming community, nearly all the herders were killed. The command found three bodies. One was found dead lying on his face with his scalp taken, his head smashed in and a long pine branch driven into his body. Further on a butter and cheese ranch was burned and everything else destroyed and rendered useless. Fine machinery was broken up and the ruin was complete. All along the line of the hostile march the same thing has occurred, and it would be but a repetition to dilate further.

The Death of Egan

There are many rumors afloat as to the tribal relations of the Indians engaged in this war, and while some men acquainted with the Indians generally in the country are inclined to believe that the hostile camp is mainly composed of Snakes, Bannacks and Piutes, there is no doubt a large sprinkling of other tribes among them, and it might be a difficult matter to find any tribe from the Central Pacific R R on the south to Snake river on the north, members of which are not with the enemy.

The Umatillas have claimed to be altogether friendly, but it seems that some of them have been acting with the hostiles for some time, but having had enough of war are now back on their reservation. The reason and manner of their coming back involved a proceeding which resulted in the death of Egan and three of his warriors and the capture of four more. As before stated, about 40 Umatillas who were with the hostiles desired to desert and return to their reservation, but were afraid their participation in the war would be punished in some way. Their friends still on the reservation communicated the fact that these hostile Umatillas wanted to come back to Maj Cornoyer and Capt Miles, who gave assurances that they might return provided they brought Egan, the noted Malheur chief, with them. Under this arrangement, on last Monday, July 15, about 40 friendly Umatillas went in the forenoon to the camp of the hostiles and intimated to Egan that they had come to join him, but privately told their people who were with him the conditions upon which they would be allowed to return to their reservation. To the terms all the Umatillas, friendly and hostile, agreed, and Egan with seven others of his personal followers was called outside of the hostile camp ostensibly for the purpose of parleying over the conditions of their union with him. When all parties had reached a spot out of reach of bullets from the camp of the main body of the Indians Egan was seized and informed that he was to be carried to the camp of the Bostons. With the seven followers he resisted and attempted to escape. Instantly over half a hundred rifles were leveled and Egan, the terror of the defenceless, the contempt of the brave, with three out of the seven followers, bit the dust. The other four Malheurs were brought to Capt Miles' command as prisoners. Egan and his dead were scalped and the Umatillas returned to Miles' command with the trophies of their success, their erring brethren returning with them. Capt Miles told the Indians that as there might be some dispute as to the identity of Egan's scalp it might be well to bring in some other part of his body, and they again went to the scene of the killing and brought in his head and his left arm. The arm was found to have been recently fractured above the elbow by a bullet and was enclosed in splints and bandages and bound to his breast. This wound was probably made by a ball from the gun in the hands of Mr Robie at the time Egan and his party called on Messrs Robie & French for their horses at Steens Mountain about three weeks before.

Egan was a man rather below the medium size of white men, about 40 or 45 years of age, and was a born devil, having only been restrained from constant murder and pillage by fear. While not brave, he was skilled in the arts of Indian warfare, cunning and treacherous. His taking off and its manner were doubtless subjects of great perturbation in the hostile camp, as he was regarded as the leader of the whole force, though others ranked with him in command. Some whites profess to feel disgust at the action of the Umatillas in seducing Egan from his camp under false pretenses and then taking his life, but while we might condemn the theory of their conduct we have reason to be satisfied with its results. The villain would not fight armed men, but his savage propensities led him to the utmost cruelty to the defenseless who fell into his hands. Homely, a sub chief of the Umatillas, claims and is reported to have fired the shot which killed Egan, and will probably get the $1,000 reward offered by Mr Robie for the scalp of the reprobate.

The Umatilla Indians report that Egan had frequently been on their reservation and that in his arguments to them to induce them to join him in a war on the whites he stripped himself naked and showed 28 distinct scars on his person which he said had been made by knives or bullets in the hands of the Bostons, and claimed that he was bullet proof, that the Great Spirit had told him he never could be killed by the whites. But Birnam's wood has come to Dunsinane for him, and though the white man's bullets had marked his body from head to foot he would have terminated his career of deviltry long since had all the whites been as good shots as is Homely the Umatilla.

Troubles North of the Columbia.

Mr Long, who arrived in Portland last night, states that he and three other men were prospecting near Priest rapids last week. On Friday they unsaddled their horses and went into camp, suspecting no danger. They went to bed without any guard. During the night their horses and saddles were stolen and in the morning they started on foot for the white settlement 30 or 40 miles distant. After going a short distance eight or ten Indians made their appearance in pursuit and gave the war whoop. They fired at the men, and one of them, named Tobias, a school teacher from California, was shot through the shoulder and is now at Kittitas in a critical condition. Mr Long, who has been in that vicinity the past three weeks, has seen Smohalla, who he believes is bad at heart and desirous of stirring up his people to war on the whites. Moses is still friendly, and if let alone says he will continue so, but Smohalla's people are liable to lead Moses into trouble at any time. Moses though friendly is not satisfied. He says "when Joseph first began war he was no bigger than my finger. Now he is a big man. I am a big man now. I am strong and have many warriors," intimating that he would start out as great a man as Joseph was at the end.

The same gentleman informs us that a sort of panic similar to that prevailing in eastern Oregon exists in the settlements north of the Columbia in the vicinity of the tribes under Moses and Smohalla. Farms are deserted, stock stolen and scattered, fields of ripe grain stand uncut, while the people have fled to the temporary fortifications at the towns for protection. A few days before the trouble of Mr Long and his companions four men, two cousins named Burbank being among them, were hunting horses near the same place, and seeing two Indians driving horses which they knew belonged to them (Burbanks) they rode up and attempted to get their stock. One of the Indians fired at Walter Burbank and the other ran at him with a knife. The cousin at this moment was a short distance off and on account of intervening bushes was not seen by the Indians. Hearing the firing he rushed through the bushes and opened on the savages with a navy revolver. Being a good shot he brought down one of the Indians and thinks he killed him. They then rode rapidly as possible back to their camp and with the other two men who were there fled to the settlements, leaving their pack horse, spurs and camp equipage on the ground. The Burbanks were neither of them hit, though a bullet struck the pommel of Walter's saddle and cut through his canteens. There is but little doubt that the Indians belonged to Smohalla's band.

LITERARY NOTES

A new volume of poems may be expected from John G. Whittier in the fall.

Prof A. H. Sayce's large work, An Introduction to the Science of Language, is now ready to go to press.

Southey's Life of Nelson is soon to be published as an "English School Classic," and Walter Scott's Rokeby will follow in due time.

Rev Henry C McCook contributes to the July American Naturalist a valuable article on "The Mound making Ants of the Alleghanies."

Mr Frederick Wedmore, the art critic of the Academy, contributes a paper to the July Temple Bar on "Some Tendencies in Recent Painting."

Mr Henry Sedgwick contributes the article on "Ethics" and Prof Huxley treats of "Evolution in its Biological Aspects" in the eighth volume of the Encyclopædia Britannica.

Joaquin Miller will publish in London next September a new volume of poems to be called "Songs of Far-away Lands." It will be a volume of considerable length and is to be dedicated to Lord Houghton.

Out of ten articles in the "Princeton Review" for July seven are from the pens of foreign writers. Among them is Prof Lionel S Beale of King's College, London, whose paper on "The Materialist Revival" is his first contribution to American periodical literature.

Samuel Smiles' "Self Help" has had an exceptional popularity. Extracts from the book have just been published in Spain by Mr O'Ryan, a Spanish merchant. In Asia there have appeared a Tamil and a Japanese edition, and Turkey is the only country in Europe in which a translation of the book has not been published.

The death of Mr Bryant gives the Saturday Review an opportunity to point out to American poets that they may not hope to perch upon the very summit of Parnassus until they learn to cast behind them as a thing of naught the [illegible] American love of morals. "Not before they shall have done this may they sit on the heights and preen their plumage by the side of Milton, Coleridge, Byron and Scott."

An Old Church and an Old Pastor

[From the New York Sun, July 7.]

In the year 1749 the Dutch burghers of Bergen, now Jersey City, celebrated the semi-centennial of the pastorate of the minister of the old Dutch Reformed church. To-day the congregation of the same church are to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev Benjamin C Taylor, who preached his introductory sermon on the first Sunday in July 1828 and was declared emeritus pastor by the south classis of Bergen on September 22, 1870. The Bergen church is the oldest in the state of New Jersey, having been established in 1680, previous to which time the people worshiped in a log school house which stood within a stone's throw of the present church building. In 1773 a second building was erected, and it was used until 1842, when the present edifice was dedicated.

THE INDIAN WAR!

Indians Still at McKay Creek

UMATILLA, July 18.

The following is from Pendleton, July 18:

We have quieted down here a little, caused I think mostly by the presence of soldiers in our place.

Indians are reported in considerable numbers this morning in the big bend of McKay creek.

I saw Major Throckmorton this morning. He tells me that some few Indians have been coming in on the reservation the past two nights and killing Cayuse Indian horses. They are supposed to be Columbia river Indians and Snakes trying to get revenge this way for the treachery of Umatillas.

Col Forsythe's command and the Cayuse Indians that went with the command have gone out on the trail of the Indians, and Col Sanford's command has gone out through Grand Ronde and up Wolf creek. Colonel Miles' command was last night at Pelican station. Col Throckmorton is at the agency. Col Mizner is still here awaiting orders.

Major Barnhart's sheep herder came in last night and says Indians several hundred strong were moving toward McKay creek yesterday with quite a herd of horses and a small band of sheep with them. He thinks the squaws and children went all in this band. He says they went into camp at Umahowlish's place near them. He was two days coming from Sheep Ranch, and Indians in sight most of the time until he got out in open country.

Report from Gen Wheaton

LA GRANDE, July 15—9.30 P M.

Capt J A Sladen, A A G, Fort Vancouver:

I have the honor to report the situation as follows: At 5 P M yesterday Forsythe's cavalry column reached Starkey's ranch, on Daley's road, following ninety-three Umatillas who were in charge of three white scouts. At 1.15 this morning I learn by courier that at 2 P M yesterday the Umatillas struck the trail of the hostiles twenty miles beyond Starkey's. The direction of the trail then was toward the head of Birch creek. At 7 P M yesterday the hostiles were believed to be about twenty miles ahead of the Umatillas. I have ordered the cavalry column to follow them. At 11.20 this morning I received the following from Forsythe: He moved from Starkey's in the evening, leaving his pack train at Starkey's ranch. He found the Umatillas encamped on the hostiles trail. They had overtaken them at that point, charged them, killed 17 bucks, captured 25 women and children and 60 or 70 head of stock. The Umatillas only lost two ponies. They report the hostiles as breaking up into small parties and getting off as fast as possible. The death of Egan evidently demoralized them. They started to escape immediately after it occurred. The Umatillas had their fight in the vicinity of the East Fork of Birch creek.

Forsythe with his cavalry column moves at 7 this morning. If the hostiles are breaking up into little bands as reported and as I expected, it will be useless to start Miles' infantry column to follow the cavalry. I may be able to so dispose of the foot troops as to prevent any organized bands of hostiles moving with any large herds toward the Weiser country. I will probably learn to-day whether to hold Miles' column about here guarding passes in this vicinity, or to move it further south or southwest.

The Umatillas have probably jaded their horses and returned with their trophies to their reservation. I will push Sanford with his squadron and Nez Perce scouts west to Granite Creek Pass to co-operate with Forsythe and to intercept any bands of hostiles coming that way en route to Weiser. I had ordered Sanford to the mouth of Wolf creek, where he now is. I will notify Egbert and Wagner of the situation and supposed intention of the hostiles to scatter into small parties and get back into the Weiser country. I have guards at Cayuse, Meacham's and Pelican, and will escort mail coaches from La Grande to Umatilla agency until the road is safe. WHEATON.

Another Dispatch from Wheaton.

The following is received, dated at camp near Meacham's on the Blue mountains, 12 o'clock midnight, July 16:

The situation to-night is as follows: The movement of Sanford's cavalry and Nez Perces scouts to this point from La Grande while the main columns were advancing from the north evidently caused a panic among the hostiles. The trail from this point is strewn for six miles with large quantities of provisions, and to them valuable supplies, and they had not time to gather and run off their many ponies scattered through the country. At my request 97 reservation Umatillas came this morning to help whip the Bannacks and Snakes; they brought in the head of Chief Egan for identification and ten scalps. I sent them this evening with three white scouts to intercept the hostile trail eight miles southwest of us. They think the two hostile trails end towards the head of Grand Ronde or Powder river, though they may join and the hostiles halt at the head of McKay's creek. Have ordered Forsythe's cavalry to follow the Umatillas in the morning. Will move Miles' infantry and artillery columns south or west as the direction of the hostiles may require. Egbert, now at La Grande, will be held ready to go south to Powder river. Have sent Sanford to the mouth of Wolf creek. Seven Umatillas have been killed on this road during the last five days.

Starting Home.

SUSANVILLE, July 19.—The families that arrived here from Surprise valley during the Indian excitement started for their home this morning.

The Lemhi Bannacks

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—A Boise City dispatch says "Ten Doy," chief of the Bannacks at Lemhi, wishes to remain friendly but cannot [illegible]ol his warriors. Settlers have all left [illegible] homes and are camped at Salmon City. Ten Doy and his son notified all settlers to leave their homes and go to town as he believed an outbreak liable to occur at any time. Travel has nearly ceased, but the mails are still carried.

And they are Good Book Men Too

[From the New York World.]

It is to be observed also that the Columbias are not only good rowing men but good reading men, and have held their own at their books as well as at their oars. The notion that excellence in the college boat necessarily means inferiority on the college bench has not been exploded by all the evidence to the contrary which the boating history of Oxford and of Cambridge supplies. The success of Columbia at Henley ought to operate and doubtless will operate as a direct stimulus to the spirit and ambition of our ancient metropolitan college in all directions. Such a victory, like mediæval knighthood, obliges the winners to wear it worthily.

A Rebuke for Hayes

[From the Utica Republican (Conkling Organ).]

The truth may be all on the administration side of the story. But the president of the United States should not say to a newspaper reporter for publication that proceedings which must vindicate or condemn him are a farce. Let us hope that the remark has been unfairly reported.

The Congressional Record will occupy six volumes this session and will be ready for delivery on the 1st proximo. It makes 4,100 pages besides an appendix of 700 pages containing speeches that were never delivered.

Two years ago Gov. McEnery alluded to Mr F. J. Weber of Louisiana, the two bowers, joker and ace of trumps of the Potter committee, as "the greatest liar in the south." They all do it.

A SCARE IN YAKIMA.

YAKIMA CITY, July 15, 1878.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

There has at no time in the history of the Yakima country has such an unsettled state of affairs existed as at the present. Business of all kinds is arrested, merchants refuse to credit their best customers, herders have forsaken their flocks, farmers have deserted their homes, and the aspect of things in general is distressing. The reservation Indians are cashing away in secluded spots everything they cannot carry with them on horseback, and driving their horses far into the mountains. There are two thousand ponies up the Natches about thirty miles from here, and they are daily expecting an attack from the hostiles or the whites. Two stockades are under way, one in this city and another six miles above town on the Attanum. The latter is situated on the Dickenson place in the center of the meadow. It is about 125 feet square and eight feet high, with rifle pits on the outside, built of sod. The walls are three feet thick at the base. Within this thick enclosure about fifty families have taken refuge. Picket guards are kept out day and night. The great trouble is scarcity of arms and ammunition. Not more than one man out of five has any weapons of defense at all, and some of them have no cartridges. In case an attack should be made by 50 or 100 Indians it could result in nothing else than a wholesale slaughter. It is sorrowful to hear the cries of women and children as the alarming reports come in, some of them of course without a shadow of foundation.

On Friday evening about dark messengers were dispatched through the whole valley notifying the settlers that Chief Moses and his warriors had made an attack on Kittitas valley and it was a preconcerted plan that the Yakima Indians should murder all the settlers on the Attanum the same night. Almost every family in the valley threw a few valuables into a wagon and drove post haste to an appointed place in a meadow, where a great circle was made with the wagons and the women and children were placed inside of the ring, and in breathless suspense awaited the coming of the treacherous savages. All expected their fate; some fell to their knees, while others shouldered their rifles and resolved to sell their lives as dearly as possible. About 2 o'clock A M volumes of dust were seen rising in the distance. It was clear moonlight. Imagine our consternation when we beheld about 200 horses coming at full speed down the mountain side. When they reached the river a half mile distant they changed their course and proceeded up the Attanum. When opposite Polly and Imbrie's ranch they passed out of sight. Then all was quiet until daybreak. They proved to be a few friendly Indians fleeing from the hostiles and driving about 2000 ponies. The excitement, however, is gradually subsiding, but settlers are loth to return to their homes until they have more assurance of safety. Some straggling Indians are raiding on stock, but further than that no damage was done. A party of Indians captured a lot of horses belonging to Mr Burbank and were riding some of them away, when they met the owner and another young man and commenced firing on them. One bullet went through Burbank's saddle and another through his coat. The other man drew his revolver and shot one Indian through the breast. The Indians pursued about three miles but gave up the chase and returned. This occurred about fifteen miles from this city.

THE "GREAT" VICTORY

Preaching an apotheosis of the greenback the Standard rejoices that it has been enacted by congress that the three hundred and fifty millions of greenback dollars that are alive shall stay alive There is a touch of wild transport a sort of dithyrambic rapture in its exclamation that the funeral of the people's money which was appointed for the first of January next will not take place The greenbacks, it is declared with exultation, are all peace greenbacks now and permanent money This is a great victory over the money power and it is essentially a Democratic victory A philosopher does not more certainly find sermons in stones and books in the running brooks than the imaginative individual who puts party before all else in the world finds "victory" in everything Forty years ago the great lights of the Democratic party were fighting paper currency with all their might When they had succeeded they proclaimed that the victory they had won for an exclusive currency of gold and silver was a great victory over the money power, and essentially a Democratic victory We are required now to shout for a Democratic victory because congress has declared that paper currency with which the country was flooded by the untoward accident of war, shall be the permanent currency of the country

Let it be observed that there is in this inconsistency no appeal from the old Democratic party to the new We are required to subscribe to these antagonistic principles in the name of the same grand old historic party." The Standard would receive, if not with indignation at least with invincible incredulity, an intimation that there is any discrepancy between the new and the old. It supposes that Jackson and Benton and all the great lights of the party in the former generation were paper currency men, and hated gold intensely as an instrument of oppression in the hands of the money power

But by those who know something of the long war between coin and paper currency which was in its height a little above forty years ago, the history has been read somewhat differently. Then the leaders of the Democratic party were found taking their stand exclusively upon hard money. Bullionists they were in the largest sense of that term, and contemners of paper currency to the last degree of reprobation, Government they held, had no right to authorize emissions of paper and force them upon the country It was war upon the currency of the constitution, which currency they maintained was gold and silver, and could not be anything else. They resisted the use of paper, as they declared, to save the people from oppression and the constitution from violation Under paper money—and there was less than twenty millions then authorized by the government—the constitution was bleeding, the government creditor was suffering and the country was sinking into disgrace This was the old Democracy. Who among the present advocates of paper currency has any solicitude about the government creditor now, or thinks for a moment about any disgrace to the country? It was the old fogy style to bother about these things, and to denounce a national manufactory of paper money for the general and permanent use of the country as a swindle through which it was proposed to force people to take paper or go without their pay. We have another Democracy now. Its faith is a figment which it calls "absolute money." Government can create it, rivaling even the work of omnipotence which we never see producing a result without materials suited to its ends.

These rejoicings, therefore, in the name of the Democratic party over an act of congress which it is hoped will permanently exclude gold as the basis of currency, are a rather new fashion. They have been heard only during the last ten years They grew out of an argument or theory originally invented as a means of repudiating the national debt. Many have now argued themselves into a belief of the theory who have forgotten the circumstances under which it had its origin. The sophistry that government can make good and permanent money out of nothing and redeemable in nothing would have been received with general derision twenty years ago That it is now credited by a good many people only shows how any kind of delusion under conditions favorable to its growth, may make progress for a time, though at last to be arrested by some special event which usually rises out of its own folly

COWARDS AND FIENDS.

The Indians now in arms have shown themselves alike the most contemptible of cowards and the most inhuman of fiends They will not fight at all, it is impossible to bring them to battle, and their only motive is to rob, to murder and to mutilate. If they know it they will take no chances and incur no risks whatever. True to their cowardly and savage instincts, they attack only the unarmed, lie in wait for those they can kill without danger to themselves, run like poltroons from the first appearance of an attack and refuse to accept battle with every odds of numbers and every advantage of position in their favor. These are the most cowardly and at the same time the most villainous and diabolic wretches with whom the country has yet had to deal Some Indians have the redeeming trait of bravery, and though cruel and merciless will fight, at all events but these will not Before any attack made by the troops they scatter like sheep They hunt only the unarmed and kill from the mere lust of murder Every person whom they have murdered has been shockingly mutilated. The atrocities thus committed will not bear even an attempt at description. Not only has their fiend like malignity, fit concomitant of their wolfish cowardice, been exercised in this way but it has also been practised upon dumb animals Some they have wantonly killed from the mere love of destruction In other instances they have caught animals and partly flayed them, and then let them go Examples are given of their having taken sheep chopped off their fore legs and left them alive and in many cases they have wantonly shot the dams and left the young bleating piteously around them Seldom if ever has it been necessary to deal with miscreants so [illegible] and if a single one of them is allowed to live after they are hunted down humanity will be outraged almost as much as it has been recently by their unspeakable atrocities

THE GOVERNOR AND THE WAR

It would have been the extreme of folly for Gov Chadwick to call out volunteers before he could know there would be any real occasion for them Still greater folly would it have been to call them out when there were no arms to be put in their hands It would judgment in him to have called hurriedly for men from this part of the state to go to the scene of hostilities when there were hundreds of men on the spot offering their services who could not be armed These are facts to be considered when it is asserted that the governor has not acted with discretion or done all in his power on this occasion It is sufficiently known that THE OREGONIAN is not entered upon the list of Gov Chadwick's admirers if he has any but the irrational criticism which has been visited upon him in connection with this matter obliges it to say that he has acted judiciously and commendably that he did not lose his head and attempt precipitately to do things which he had no power to accomplish and that on the whole with the means at his disposal, or with any means he could create he could not have done more

It was a sharp hit at Mr Slater in regard to back pay which appeared in a communication published in THE OREGONIAN on Friday and the communication was the production of a well known member of the party with which Mr Slater associates The gentleman who says he took the back pay because the committee would not allow him to charge for mileage by a roundabout route is understood to be a candidate for the senate He is known to be one of the most extreme of the greenback wing of his party having conceived his liking for greenbacks perhaps from the circumstance that he drew his back pay in that material, and found it, not perhaps the best money in the world but good e—nough

The account of the killing of Egan is about as discreditable to the Umatilla Indians as any of that scoundrel's own acts ever were to himself It is quite certain that the Umatillas first betrayed and then murdered him Thankful that he is dead we are not going to quibble just now over the moral aspects of his taking off, but it is well enough to note the circumstance as illustrating a phase of the universal Indian character

Hon Hugh McCulloch formerly secretary of the treasury and one of the ablest who ever held the position, made a financial speech on the fourth of July at Woodstock, Conn, in which he stoutly maintained that the panic of 1873 and all its attendant and long drawn out evils and consequences were due to not continuing the withdrawal of legal tender notes from circulation as was begun under his administration

Fine Prospect in South Carolina

It might be well, while the Potter committee is pretending to make efforts to ascertain whether there was any intimidation in Louisiana in the election of 1876, to turn its attention to what is just now going on in South Carolina Following is a dispatch from Washington, July 15

Information from Abbeville, South Carolina, is to the effect that the Democrats have already begun a system of terrorism to prevent the Republicans organizing The only charge made is that the Republicans have made up a ticket and are secretly circulating it among the colored voters An Edgefield paper, commenting on this atrocious crime, says that the two men who are suspected of being Republican leaders should, if they dare to lift their heads or fingers in political machinations, be seized and hung, to use its own words, "Yes, we mean exactly what we say If those named and others ever dare to inaugurate their political schemes in Edgefield again, let us hang them. Not only our self respect, but our safety demands it, and that without masks or disguises"

Working of the Silver Law.

[Washington Special, July 15]

The treasury department has been informed of a curious working of the silver law. Parties in San Francisco have been in the habit of exchanging gold dollars for silver dollars, and then obtaining silver certificates These they send to New York, use them in payment of customs, and thus save the handling or transportation of gold, and in this way have been able to transact a considerable and profitable business

A note from Amity Yamhill county says Harvesting has fairly commenced with self binders headers expect to be going before the first of August fully ten or more days earlier than last year But most of the crop will be cut this season with the harvester

Yamhill Reporter Wheat and other grains have not suffered near so much from drouth as many try to make out Late spring grain we admit is considerably hurt, but fall grain looks well Even on the very top of Chehalem mountain prospects are fair for a good crop

Salem Statesman From parties in from the country we learn that there was quite a heavy rain fall both east and west of Salem on the 16th and that crops are much better than it was expected they would be some two weeks ago The fall grain is generally very good and most of the spring grain will be average

From Old Yamhill County, that Never Fails

This county will have an abundant harvest, the dry weather not having injured the grain but very little compared with other parts of the state and the fruit crop is said to be much better than some other parts A stranger can see the self binder traveling around the golden grain, leaving it in bundles, neatly tied, ready for the barn or threshing machine and hand in hand may be found the Plummer Fruit Dryer which has come among us to administer to our wants in preserving our fruits and fitting them for a foreign market and badly did we need them for we will have an abundant crop this year Mr Plummer has sold some five thousand dollars worth of machines during the first week s sojourn among us The new narrow gauge railroad will be in fine running order between Dayton and Sheridan by September 15th or 30th We certainly cannot help but be prosperous and happy

SATURDAY MORNING JULY 20 1878

A CHILD'S STORY

With rosy cheeks and golden hair
And joyous smile just turned of three
He came and said that he must tell
A tale to me

Three little people so he spoke
Went out to seek for God above
And two of them were Faith and Hope
The other Love

They wandered near they wandered far
But never found the God they sought
And Faith and Hope were lost and gone
And came to nought

I asked of Love and where was he
"Oh mother [illegible] strong to bear
He struggled on to God at last
[illegible] is there

And I must go [illegible]
He danced away with laughing eyes
Blue as the glacier's sapphire [illegible]
Or summer skies

But in my brain the baby [illegible]
Reiterate over and over
As if it were the last true word
Of this sad hour

Oh hope deferred oh faltering faith
Weak forces doomed to droop and die
Not yours to find man's mystic God
Now or eternally

In Love as yet but faintly know
Lies all the future of our kind
Cling to him that on some far shore
Faith Hope ye find

A £12 000 CHECK.

The hour grew late and Mr Brand paced his chamber in moody silence The train had come in but his messenger had not returned and the merchant was troubled—troubled by a vague sort of doubt which haunted him in spite of his faith in Lake A merry, sober old trader of long experience had said that Lake was too young to fill the important position which he held but Mr Brand had never found his trust in Tom misplaced

Having heard rumors concerning a house with which he had extensive dealings the merchant had dispatched Lake to London telling him to make inquiries, and in any case to get the partners of the firm in question to settle their account

So Lake had gone from Liverpool to London The time appointed for his return passed, and still he did not come

A lady entered, and stole to the merchant's side. Her own sweet face was anxious and there was a tremor in the music of her voice as she said

"Do you think he will be here to night dear papa?

I hope so Mary but it is very late

"Is there no other train?"

"Only the night express and that does not stop, except at the central stations

"Perhaps he will come, papa he would not mind coming ten miles even he had to walk"

"He should not have missed the train said Mr Brand, sternly, punctuality is an imperative duty with men of business

"But papa, something may have occurred to detain him

"Nothing should detain a man who has given his word."

The fair pleader was silenced Her father was angry, and knowing his strictness of principle and how inveterate was his dislike to any breach of discipline or duty she did not venture to speak again

The time dragged slowly on, Mr Brand continued his restless walk, and Mary sat subdued and quiet watching him She saw that he was listening as the night express went whirling by, and from the depths of her heart there went a prayer that Lake would come safely home The girl loved him, would have staked her life on his truth, and knew that he was not beyond his time through any weakness or wrong Two slow, weary hours passed Mr Brand was reading the commercial news, but, for the first time in his life, it did not interest him he was thinking of the young clerk and the heavy sum of money that would be in his possession should the London firm have paid him And Mary, reading her father's countenance, felt chilled and pained by the slur cast on her lover's honesty by his suspicions Her every thought was a denial to his doubts, and, as the rapid clatter of a horse's feet rang out, she ran to the window

"Look!" she said dashing the curtains aside with eager hands; "look, papa I said he would come—I knew he would"

The merchant's stern features relaxed with a smile of pleasure he was not emotional or demonstrative, but his daughter's gladness pleased him.

There were a few moments of expectancy and then Tom Lake came in. He went straight to Mr. Brand, only noticing with a bow the lovely face whose glance filled his soul.

"They have paid," he said quietly, as he placed a thick pocketbook in the merchant's hand, but I think we were only just in time

"Indeed!"

"There was a consultation at the banker's before I could get cash for the check

"Do you think they will break?"

"Hopelessly. They have given me an immense order, but it would not be wise to forward the goods."

"You did not hint that we had the slightest fear?"

"No, but I was glad to get the money £12,000 would have been a heavy loss

"It would have done me serious injury just now"

"And yet," said Tom gravely "this morning the odds were considerably against its ever reaching you."

"How?"

Tom took two chairs placed them side by side near the fire, led Mary to one and seated himself in the other He had done his duty as the merchant's clerk, and now was Mr Brand's prospective son in law and partner

"I had an adventure," he said. "I was the hero of a strange story in a ride by express

Mary bent forward to listen Tom clasped her hand in his own Mr Brand sat opposite them, interested by the speaker's manner, as he began

When I got the check I had an idea that all might not be well, so to make sure I presented it at the banker's. There was as I told you, a consultation before they cashed it, and while the consultation was going forward I noticed a stranger looking at me intently I knew the man in my younger and wilder days, I had met him often at the race course in billiard rooms, and in other places more or less respectable. Now he was changing a check for some petty amount and was evidently astonished by the immensity of the order I had presented. I left the bank with my pocket book full of notes, and found that I had lost the train. The next would be the night express, so I strolled into a billiard room. A man is just as safe with a fortune in his pocket as if penniless, so that he is wise enough to hold his tongue. There was some clever playing going on, and I stood watching the players till some one challenged me to have a game. If I have one special vanity, it is my science with the cue. I accepted, and as I did so a strange feeling which had been growing upon me took a sudden turn which startled me

My challenger was the man whom I had noticed at the banker's. There was nothing strange in the fact of his being in the room, one of his favorite resorts but I was possessed by the vague shadow of a single idea. I had read somewhere of a man being followed and plundered in a train, and somehow I associated the story with the man before me It was the first time I had ever paid him any particular attention but I gave him full observation now. The more I looked at him the less I liked him He was handsome gentlemanly with a fair form and elegant figure, full of suppleness and strength His manner was singularly unassuming his face frank and genial but by looking closely at him you could see something sinister looking in the depth and softness of his eyes

I never liked a stranger to be affable and prepossessing, and my friend was the very pink of affability and grace

We played for an hour with alternating success He was an amusing companion well informed and had traveled but I was shy of conversation I left him and still having some time to spare, went to see a friend in the Temple.

When, at the expiration of some thirty or forty minutes I emerged into Fleet street almost the first person on whom my gaze fell was my late antagonist at billiards

I thought there was something more than a mere coincidence in this second meeting since we stood together at the banker's He was in a cigar shop opposite

Not a hundred yards from the Temple gate stood a man whom I recognized with a very welcome feeling It was George Vixen the detective.

He was fashionably dressed and looked an aristocrat of the first water I went up and greeting him as I should an old familiar friend held out my hand and said

"Come and drink a glass of wine with me I have something to say

He shook [illegible] in the [illegible] possible I [illegible] his arm and we [illegible] public bar [illegible] hotel

I told [illegible] of my [illegible] of the sum [illegible] and of the journey I had to perform by rail

I saw [illegible] through the glass of the [illegible] photograph of the two [illegible]

[illegible] with [illegible] the [illegible] at the [illegible] twelve [illegible]

[illegible]

And [illegible]

I shall travel [illegible] by the night express

He [illegible] determined [illegible] low

Taking a [illegible] across the road I saw my man [illegible] It was quite [illegible] though I [illegible] St Paul's

I [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] through the city [illegible] for the station [illegible] did not come in sight though I kept well on the alert

I took my ticket lingering almost to the moment of starting before I entered the carriage but my man did not appear Two men were in the compartment with me I could not see the face of one and the other was a stranger

The bell rang The guard had just time to put a bewildered old gentleman in by my side and we were off

The man whose face I had not seen turned toward me

I could hardly repress an exclamation There was no mistaking that frank genial countenance nor the lurking devil in those eyes whose softness was so sinister

He had me then at last Vixen had broken his promise and I was left to travel that perilous journey alone with the man who had followed me so skillfully—another who might be his confederate and an old gentleman, who after grumbling out his indignation against all railway servants and locomotive traveling in general was fast asleep in the corner

That the intentions of my billiard player were bad were manifested by the fact of his having assumed a false mustache and beard They added to the beauty of his face but left to his eyes that sleepy cruel glitter that is characteristic of the Asiatic

He spoke to me remarked the oddity of our being traveling companions and grew unpleasantly familiar I answered him not wishing to appear churlish or afraid knowing that I could trust something to my own strength should the worst come

We had made the last stoppage and were rolling swiftly through the gloom when among other topics our conversation touched on jewelry he drew a showy ring from his finger telling me it was a curious piece of workmanship, having a secret spring which he said I could not discover

I took it searched in vain for a spring then returned it to him It dropped and rolled under my feet

I stooped to pick it up and so did he but in that moment while my head was down, he had me tight by the throat and threw me to the carriage floor

His confederate was on me in an instant I could scarcely breathe and could not struggle for a heavy knee was upon my chest and two strong brutal hands were crushing the life from my throat

Though the horror of the situation did not last a minute it seemed an eternity to me I felt the ruffians hands searching for my pocketbook and I strained desperately for a chance of resistance

Their work was nearly done Cramped in that small space I was powerless and the veins in my throat and head were swelling like sinuous bars, when the old gentleman in the corner awoke and came to my assistance I heard a low whirr of some weapon in its descent and my first assailant reeled from me stunned Then the old gentleman with a strength and rapidity of action wonderful to see in a person of his age seized the scoundrel, lifted him away and dashed him down on a seat

There was a brief struggle and then I heard a sharp click—scoundrel the second had a pair of handcuffs on his wrists

"They were more prompt than I had expected," said the old gentleman removing his woolen comforter, with which he fastened my first assailant's hands behind him "and a railway carriage does not afford much scope for a struggle"

The pocketbook was safe The ruffians were securely bound, and the old gentleman who without his spectacles and muffler, stood out in bold and pleasant relief as the detective kept guard over them

At the station they were handed over into the custody of the police I was all right by that time Vixen rode with me as far as the hotel nearest here, and to morrow he will call and see if I am any the worse for my ride by express

The contents of the pocketbook were Mary's bridal dowry

The detective speaks of the senior partner in the firm of Brand & Lake as the most hospitable and generous man he ever met in the course of his professional career

Lake was quite cured of his love for billiard playing He had too narrow an escape and he did not forget the lesson

His Wonderful Success

IN THE TREATMENT OF ALL

Chronic and Difficult Diseases.

He has astonished the People of this Coast by his skillful Operations.

HE HAS TAUGHT IN HIS

public and private lectures the true principles of health and life to both male and female. He has also warned them against habits that would be likely to produce disease in plain and comprehensive language. But where he has found them crushed and broken down by disease mentally and physically he has restored them to health and happiness for it is well understood that without health there can be no happiness.

has made a specialty in the treatment of the following diseases Catarrh Bronchitis, and all diseases of the throat and chest by an entirely new system only known to himself Diseases of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs including Spermatorrhea Seminal Weakness or premature loss of Manhood In the treatment of these diseases he has made a world wide reputation by his astonishing success not only on this Coast but throughout the whole United States. Diseases of the stomach bowels liver and kidneys as well as all diseases of the blood and skin he has become master of and never fails to give relief at once and permanently cures the case if he is applied to in time to ladies only for years and is perfectly familiar with all female complaints and understands their delicate and refined organization as well as the proper remedies which should be used to allay their suffering and restore them to perfect health

THE DOCTOR HAS GIVEN SPECIAL LECTURES

THE DOCTOR HAS THIS ADVANTAGE

over most physicians—he can tell the patients' disease the moment he comes in contact with them without any aid from the individual This accounts in part for this great professional success

All surgical operations can be performed by his skillful hand, and the patient need not fear the result.

will send to those living at a distance and who cannot well visit his office a list of Printed Questions and by the answers when filled out he can tell the disease as well as the proper treatment almost as well as seeing the patient personally and will forward the proper medicines or instruments to any part of the country with full instructions and advice Each letter requiring advice or list of questions must contain two postage stamps

Everything strictly confidential and honorable
